How to Fix

I Client-Side (JavaScript) Cookie References

Cause

Cookies are created at the client side

Risk

The worst case scenario for this attack depends on the context and role of the cookies that are created at the client side

A cookie is a piece of information usually created by the Web server and stored in the Web browser.

The cookie contains information used by web applications mainly (but not only) to identify users and maintain their state.

AppScan detected that the JavaScript code at the client side is used to manipulate (either create or modify) the site's cookies.

It is possible for an attacker to view this code, understand its logic, and use it to compose his own cookies, or modify existing ones, based on this knowledge.

The damage an attacker may cause depends on how the application uses its cookies, or what information it stores in them.

Among other things, cookie manipulation may lead to session hijacking or privilege escalation.

Other vulnerabilities caused by cookie poisoning contain SQL injection and Cross-Site scripting.

Fix recommendation

[1] Avoid placing business/security logic at the client side.

[2] Find and remove insecure client-side Javascript code which may pose a security threat to the site.

L Trusted types in scripts not enforced in CSP

Cause

Insecure web application programming or configuration

Risk

The "Content-Security-Policy" header is designed to modify the way browsers render pages, and thus to protect from various cross-site injections, including Cross-Site Scripting. It is important to set the header value correctly, in a way that will not prevent proper operation of the web site.

Not using Trusted Types can allow attackers to inject scripts, as a result, this increases the risk of XSS vulnerabilities.

Fix recommendation

Consider using 'require-trusted-types-for' directive to prevent DOM-based XSS attacks.

Add "require-trusted-types-for 'script'" directive to your CSP to enforce Trusted Types for scripts.
